The Importance of Citing Sources

When you acknowledge the contributions of others to your work, you act with academic integrity. Academic integrity is a firm adherence to five fundamental values:

- Honesty
- Trust
- Fairness
- Respect
- Responsibility

About the ACS Style Guide

The provides editorial guidelines for American Chemical Society publications. The Guide contains information to assist the prospective author: hints on writing styles and word usage; a chart of chemical abbreviations, acronyms and symbols; The International System of Units; and CASSI abbreviations for the 1000+ most commonly cited journals.

This “how to” guide lists only a few of the ACS rules for citing references. It is highly recommended that authors consult the Guide for additional direction.

This “how to” guide is based on information from:

- The ACS Author & Reviewer Resource Center: http://pubs.acs.org/page/4authors/index.html

Citing References in Text - p. 287

Every reference to another work should be assigned a number in brackets [ ]. These appear in numeric order, so the first reference would be followed by [1], the second by [2], and so on. This determines the order of the “reference list” at the end of the paper.

Superscript

Oscillation in the reaction of benzaldehyde with oxygen was reported previously.3

Italic

The mineralization of TCE by a pure culture of a methane-oxidizing organism has been reported (6).

Author-Date

When the cited reference appears at the end of a sentence, use these formats:

- Single author: Most workers have placed C. minckleyi into several discrete morphs (Trapani 2003).
- Two authors: The constant (of integration) is known as the Bernoulli constant (Finnemore and Franzini, 2002).
- Context influences the appearance of color (Kandel, et al., 2000).

When the author(s) of the cited reference appear(s) in the sentence, use these formats:

- Single author: Trapani noted that most workers have placed C. minckleyi into several discrete morphs (2003).
- Two authors: Finnemore and Franzini found no correlation between… (2002).
- Three of more authors: As reported by Kandel, et al., context influences the appearance of color (2000).

Reference List - p. 325

At the end of the paper, combine materials cited into a “Reference List.” Do not include materials that have not been cited in the text of the paper. Organize the references alphabetically by the first author’s last name. Use a hanging indent and single space for each entry in the reference list.
